I'm a senior software engineer with an appetite for complex problems. I'm easy going & take responsibility for my work. Most of my expertise is with PHP, Python, MySQL, JavaScript & related tech, but I'll fiddle with anything when I get the chance.

I care about code architecture. I love hard challenges, clean code & learning new things. Bonus points for open source projects. I play soccer & like to travel.

Experience

Wikimedia Foundation
San Francisco, USA (remote)
2012 – present

Software engineer

I'm involved in projects to increase editor participation on Wikipedia, like Flow: a modern discussion/collaboration system.

Most fun lies in architecting robust solutions for the unconventional challenges we face in terms of performance & scalability, taking away most of the headaches to ensure we can build new features at a fast pace.

PHP, MySQL, JavaScript, jQuery, memcached, Redis, Elasticsearch, SASS, LESS, handlebars, OOP, scalability, code review, GIT, PHPUnit, Scrum, …

2008 – 2012

Lead developer

I lead the projects of our clients and made sure they ship flawlessly. I enjoyed being responsible for my team and building great stuff together.

In my second role as product owner of Fork CMS, I lead its technical direction, defined priorities & assigned resources to grow this open-source project.

PHP, MySQL, JavaScript, jQuery, memcached, Symfony, Composer, OOP, DNS, GIT, APIs, accessibility, SEO, waterfall, …

Open source

I've had the fortune of working in somewhat open source minded companies. A lot of my work is "out in the open", most of which is on (or mirrored on) GitHub: github.com/matthiasmullie

The projects I've worked on the most:

mediawiki.org   fork-cms.com   minifier.org

scrapbook.cash

Certification
